MEMPHIS EDITOR MAKES FORTUNE

Former News Scimitar Sport Writer Now Magnate in Texas Oil Field.

From sporting editor to oil capitalist in less than two years time is the story in brief of the remarkable and successful career of A. M. Kelsker, of Memphis, who is back home for a few days visiting relatives and friends. "Kike" is just the same old happy-go-lucky, soft-talking fellow that he always was. He hasn't changed a bit since the day he walked out of The News Scimitar editorial department and left the key to the sporting editor's desk with the managing editor, to take a similar position with the Star-Telegram at Fort Worth, Tex. His bank account may be swelled to the point of bursting but, as his friends say, his head is still normal, and thereby hangs a story—story that like all yarns of the Texas oil field, is so fairy-like in character as to be almost unbelievable. As he relates it, "I was sitting in the office of the Star-Telegram one day, watching the long string of automobiles roll by, mulling over my fate. I saw fellows pass in $1,000 cars, and I knew personally who they were. I knew who they were in the oil business and who I also knew had no more knowledge about the game than I did. I decided to quit. When I told the boys that I was through with the newspaper game and was going to seek my little fortune in oil they gave me the laugh and three reasons in which to go broke. But I was lucky, just lucky, that's all."

"One day, a short time after I had forsaken the smell of printers' ink, I met a real estate man who was very anxious to get hold of some acreage in Stephens county, adjacent to the oil belt. I thought nothing of his remarks until half an hour later when I saw another real estate dealer who had some property in Stephens county he wanted to sell. Of course I immediately turned up the pavement to get Jones and Smith together. I merely introduced them, but the deal was put through and for my bringing them together I received all the money in the world—$2,000."

Kelsker grinned as he told it, and pulled reflectively on his fat perfect. "What did you do then, Kike?" an acquaintance asked.

The young magnate chuckled. "I took that check to the bank right then, got it cashed in small bills and distributed the money all over my person. My pocket was bulging with it. I walked into the editorial department of the Star-Telegram and strolled stately about waiting for someone to say something. They did."

"How's the oil business, Kike?" one of the boys chirped, grinning rather maliciously. "I didn't say a word. Instead I reached into first one pocket and then the other, tossing a roll of bills at each dip, onto the city desk. Well, sir, there were more pep-eyed guys about that shop than you ever saw. I almost broke up the staff."

Bitter or Better Baking

A letter makes a great difference in a word. A word makes a great difference in baking powders.

If the little word "alum" appears on the label it may mean bitter baking.

If the words "Dr. Price's" stand out bold and strong, they surely mean BETTER baking.

This is only one reason why it pays to use

Dr. PRICE'S CREAM BAKING POWDER

Contains No Alum—Leaves No Bitter Taste
